THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
STATE HOUSE • BOSTON 02133

WILLIAM F. WELD
GOVERNOR

ARGEO PAUL CELLUCCI
LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

Dear Friend,

We are proud to introduce our thriving environmental technology industry.

The listings in this directory reflect the merging of Massachusetts' long history of technological innovation with our traditional concern for the environment. In recent years, industry advances have made it possible to control the use of hazardous chemicals in the workplace, to reduce air and water pollution caused by manufacturing, and to clean up contaminated waste sites. Massachusetts companies have a wealth of expertise in these areas, unmatched anywhere in the world.

As an administration that cares passionately about our environment, we are excited by the recent growth of the envirotech industry. We are equally pleased by the growing number of businesses - people like yourself - that care about the environment as much as we do.

We think envirotech is a great investment for the future.

Sincerely,

Bill Weld

Dear Friend:

Among the many advantages of living in a state with a celebrated heritage of concern and commitment to the environment are the incentives and opportunities provided to creative individuals who pioneer new companies to meet the technical and technological requirements associated with high levels of environmental protection.

Whether it is providing effective ways to clean up hazardous waste, or finding innovative techniques to limit toxics used in the workplace, or discovering more environmentally sound means to perform traditional industrial tasks, Massachusetts has become an international leader in the rapidly emerging "Envirotech" industry.

The Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and its agencies are committed to supporting this very important sector of the Massachusetts economy. As part of that commitment, we are proud to present this Directory and accompanying data.

We are confident that both will prove valuable resources for those around the world interested in making the business community a full partner in the effort to protect and preserve our precious natural inheritance.

Sincerely,

Susan F. Tierney

MASSACHUSETTS OFFICE OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The Massachusetts Office of International Trade was established in January, 1984 to address the exporting needs of Massachusetts firms. The office is a not-for-profit agency that assists Massachusetts companies at no charge to the company.

The primary objective of the Massachusetts Office of International Trade is to work with small and medium sized Massachusetts companies to assist them in entering an export market for the first tine or to help them increase their export sales. Towards this end, the Office provides one-on-one corporate counseling, has led numerous overseas trade missions, has attended international trade shows accompanied by Massachusetts companies and actively develops international contacts and trade leads. The office also has available an export database which provides contacts in overseas markets to assist Massachusetts companies in their export promotion. If you would like your company to be entered into our database, please complete the questionnaire at the back of the directory.

The Office has assisted in publishing the Massachusetts International Enviro Tech Directory as part of our mission to promote the Massachusetts environmental and energy industry internationally. The Office is the first contact for international companies when they are interested in identifying Massachusetts companies within the environmental and energy industry for licensing agreements, international distribution, or strategic partnerships.

Environmental Business Council

The Environmental Business Council is an association of environmental firms organized to assist established and emerging companies with business development activities so they may compete successfully in domestic and international markets. Further, the council will work to advance the development and implementation of sound environmental and energy policies, regulations and programs.

The EBC provides a unique forum for environmental and energy company executives to network with each other and to meet leading members of the academic, non-profit and government communities to discuss issues of concern to the environmental industry. The membership includes equipment manufacturers, engineering and consulting firms, solid and hazardous waste management companies, remedial and emergency response contractors, law firms, environmental analytical laboratories, investment firms and lending, financial and educational institutions.

The Council provides a much needed public voice for the emerging envirotech industry. In addition, the EBC provides its members with a wide range of business development and educational services designed to keep environmental and energy companies vital and growing.

GREEN BUSINESSES:
A PROFILE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS ENVIRONMENTAL INDUSTRY

INTRODUCTION

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has been a leader in the environmental and energy policy arena for more than a hundred years. During the last century, the Commonwealth focussed attention on the need for public open spaces by creating the Boston Common and Public Gardens, the Olmsted park systems including Boston's Emerald Necklace and metropolitan Boston's Bay Circuit parks and a network of public parks across the state. Massachusetts was among the first states to protect public health by creating public utilities to provide clean water and sanitary sewer services to urban areas. In this century, the state has taken steps to actively protect environmental resource areas such as wetlands, barrier beaches, aquifers, marine estuaries and rare and endangered species habitats. The state has pioneered programs in hazardous waste site assessment and remediation, and air and water pollution abatement. During the past few years, the state has created innovative laws and programs to encourage pollution prevention, source reduction, solid waste recycling as well as energy and water conservation.

Massachusetts is the home of many capable and creative entrepreneurs. Beginning with the Industrial Revolution and continuing through the present, Massachusetts companies have set the standard for success in many industries. The 1950's and 1960's marked the beginning of the state's high technology era with the development of the electronics industry in the Bay State. During the 1970's and 1980's, the computer industry grew rapidly, creating jobs and prosperity for many of the state's citizens. High technology companies specializing in software, biotechnology, fiber optics, and new materials have joined the ranks of computer hardware companies during the past ten years. Environmental and energy companies promise to be one of the high technology growth industries in the Commonwealth for the coming decade and beyond.

MASSACHUSETTS: A WORLD CENTER FOR ENVIRONMENTAL SERVICES AND TECHNOLOGY

Massachusetts is home to one of the largest, most diverse and competitive collections of environmental companies in the world. More than 1300 environmental and energy companies are located in Massachusetts. The combination of aggressive state environmental initiatives, and the elements needed to support entrepreneurial activity such as world class universities, a highly skilled work force, and abundant venture capital have spawned a new industry destined to become one of the state's major employers in the coming decade and into the 21st century.

In the spring of 1991, the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and the Executive Office of Economic Affairs, with the assistance of Rackemann Environmental Services, Inc. of Boston, sent a survey to approximately 1300 environmental and energy companies in the Commonwealth. A total of 452 companies completed and returned the survey to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. All of the 452 companies responding to the survey are listed in this directory.

This profile describes the information provided by these companies about their products and services, sales, customers, and opportunities for growth. A data base of the information in the survey is available at the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. A report providing a more in-depth analysis of the Commonwealth's environmental industry will be released by the Executive Offices later this fall.

A LOOK AT MASSACHUSETTS COMPANIES

The Environmental Affairs/Economic Affairs environmental company survey results can be used to answer a number of basic questions about the Massachusetts environmental industry, its current status and its future potential.

What is an "environmental" company?

For the purposes of the survey, environmental companies were defined as those companies that produce or sell products or services involved with: the conservation of energy, the provision of energy from alternative sources, the conservation of natural resources or industrial materials, the reduction or prevention of pollution, the disposal or recycling of wastes and hazardous materials, the restoration of the environment and its resources, or the production of "environmentally safe" products.

Companies responding to the survey included: environmental and energy engineering and consulting firms; solid waste companies; hazardous waste handling, storage and disposal companies; environmental and energy facility development and management companies; firms involved in the manufacturing of pollution control or monitoring devices; analytic testing laboratories; site or resource remediation companies; organic farmers; law firms with environmental law practices; and financial institutions and venture capital firms which specialize in investments in environmental companies.

How many environmental companies are located in Massachusetts?

More than 1300 environmental companies have been identified in Massachusetts. Given the high rate of start-up and the current level of consolidation that is happening in the industry, it is likely that this underestimates the current number of companies in the state.

What does the corporate profile of a "typical" environmental company look like?

More than half of the firms described themselves as "exclusively" environmental companies, which provide only environmental goods or services. The remainder of companies provided environmental goods as services as a component of a larger portfolio of products. (Please see Figure 1.) More than two thirds of the companies defined themselves as service companies; 18% described themselves as manufacturing companies; and 9% were sales and distribution firms. (Please see Figure 2.)

The companies ranged widely in age, with the typical firm having been in business for less than 20 years. The total number of firms in the state has expanded greatly during the past twenty years. (Please see Figure 3.) Of the 452 companies responding to the survey, 27% had started up during the past five years. (Please see Figure 4.) Less than 20% of the total firms are subsidiaries of or affiliated with other companies.

Where are environmental companies located?

The 452 companies who responded to the survey are located in more than 150 cities and towns through out the state. The largest collection of firms is located in the greater Boston metropolitan area; with 79 firms located in Boston; 22 in Cambridge; and 14 in Waltham. (Please see Table 1 for the Massachusetts locations with the greatest concentrations of environmental companies.)

Massachusetts environmental firms also have a national presence, with companies having offices or facilities in 39 other states. (Please see Table 2 for states with large Massachusetts company presence.) Internationally, Massachusetts environmental companies can be found on six continents in 227 different locations. The largest concentration of facilities (115) is located in Europe, most notably in the United Kingdom, France and Germany. Canada is also home to a large number of Massachusetts environmental company facilities (25).

(Please see Table 3 for international locations of Massachusetts environmental companies.)

What goods and services are provided by Massachusetts environmental companies?

The Massachusetts environmental industry is very diverse. Companies provide a wide range of environmental products and services. Of the companies responding to the survey, more than 40% provided engineering and consulting services. Approximately one third of the companies were involved in environmental facility siting or development, all aspects of solid waste management from recycling to landfilling, hazardous materials activities ranging from source reduction to treatment and disposal, and wastewater treatment. Approximately 25% of the firms provided goods or services related to emissions reduction and environmental testing. Approximately 20% of the firms manufactured monitoring equipment or provided pollution monitoring services. (Please see Figure 5.)

Who purchases products from Massachusetts environmental companies?

Massachusetts environmental companies sell their products to a wide ranging customer base. More than 90% of the firms did business with other private sector firms; more than half sold products to governmental agencies; and approximately 25% had non-profit clients such as universities and hospitals. (Please see Figure 6.)

In 1990, 56% of the companies did business exclusively in Massachusetts, 39% nationally and 5% internationally. (Please see Figure 7.)

What is the economic impact of the Massachusetts environmental industry?

The 452 companies responding to the survey reported total sales of more than $6.2 billion in 1990. (Please see Figures 8 and 9.) The average sales per firm were more than $15 million while the median sales per company was slightly less than $1 million. These 452 companies employed approximately 36,500 people in 1990.

INDUSTRY TRENDS

Massachusetts environmental companies feel very bullish about their future. More than 85% of the firms responding to the survey expected to expand their operations in Massachusetts during the next five years. (Please see Figure 10.) The total sales of these firms is expected to climb to nearly $10 billion in 1993. (Please see Figures 8 and 9.) This reflects an overall industry growth rate of more than 15% per year. Similar increases in employment are expected to accompany sales growth.

Most companies felt that increased government regulation and enforcement activities as well as consumer and business attitudes were the most significant factors affecting their ability to grow. Most companies reported expectations that the demand for environmental products and services was likely to expand significantly in the coming decade.

While growth is expected in the environmental industry as a whole, some segments are expected to experience growth at a rate greater than the industry average. Those segments include firms which manufacture environmental monitoring, testing and pollution control equipment, as well as those providing services in the area of waste reduction, pollution prevention, and resource conservation.

Massachusetts firms expect to sell more of their products in national and international markets in 1993 than in 1990.
